4. [redacted] Talked with William Darden, CIA Subcommittee of Senate Armed Services, mentioning the Director's desire to meet with our Subcommittees each month and asked if he would look into setting a date for May. He indicated it would certainly be at least ten days to two weeks before anything could be done but would check this and advise.

5. [redacted] Talked with Bob Smart, CIA Subcommittee of House Armed Services, about a Subcommittee meeting for this month and he was to advise. Subsequently, I called him again after learning that Mr. McCone had spoken with Mr. Vinson and there was general agreement on a meeting early next week. The Director had suggested Monday or Tuesday and these days were suggested to Smart. He will advise further.

9. [redacted] [redacted] and John S. Warner met with a large group in Bureau of the Budget to consider the varying departments' views on S. 2261 which is an amendment to the Communications Act to permit reciprocity in the licensing of amateur radio operators. Defense had concurred in the legislation but added words to the effect that they would like assurance that this would not be an avenue for espionage. At the meeting their position became more clear when Defense indicated they realized there could be no legislative assurance
